MOOD: awake

MUSIC: Kristin Hersh - Winter (on endless repeat)

This is what I'm listening to tonight.

Kristin Hersh, Winter, Fopp, London, 16-Jan-2...

Isn't she ferocious?

One notices that while the Platypus links to much good music, all of it seems to be performed by attractive women.

And you have a problem with this?

Not at all. Just noting what might be significant for the profile.

Aww.

Could be worse. You could be a WoW widow...

Also, I like the violin. Wonder who that is?

Kimberlee McCarrick.

Whoa. The McCarricks' myspace page yields up a strange story video for "The Key of Three." I'm not sure what the story is, mind you. But I can't stop thinking about it.

I think I'm the guy with the ears grabbing things out of the pretty box and throwing them away in disgust.

The UNSUB is clearly re-enacting a childhood trauma linked to women's shoes and umbrellas.

Oh, c'mon. Honestly, it looks like something based on well-known fairy tales from the next universe over. Where Red Riding Hood is a rabbit-girl, and the Wolf wears a tall hat and an eyepatch, and Cinderella lost the glass slipper fleeing through the woods, not running out of the ballroom... It's familiar and not, and hella scary.

And at the end, you have to pay attention to the gifts from the masked lady, and not be too quick to judge what she gives you, or it all just comes unraveled and fades away.

Or I should just ditch the symbolism and come climb a wall.

It's fairy tales mashed up with Alice In Wonderland.

And, er.

Stuff.

And you might want it to fade away. You never know.

COLLAPSE

But then you'd never know what happens next.
